EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The UN Country Team (UNCT) in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH), and in particular the UN agencies that are required to harmonise their programming cycles, UNDP, UNICEF and UNFPA have worked closely over the past 18 months to implement the UN Secretary General’s reform calls for greater collaboration and cooperation at country level in the form of the United Nations Development Assistance Framework process.

After extensive consultations with Government, other national and international partners, the UNDAF identifies three key Outcomes that will guide UNCT activity in the period 2005-2008 and in particular the interventions of UNDP, UNICEF and UNFPA.

The UNDAF Outcomes are:

a) Strengthened accountability and responsiveness of Government to pro-active citizens;
b) Improved access to and quality of basic education, health and social protection services; and,
c) Improved Government and local community management of mine action, including mine risk education (MRE) and Mine Victim assistance (MVA), and small arms and light weapons (SALW) at national and local level.

The UNCT believes that the clarity of the Outcomes to be pursued will make it far easier for the respective UN agencies to develop complementary and joint programming both between themselves and with other partners, which will, in turn, optimise the use of the technical, human and financial resources available to the UN to support the challenges of post war BiH. The country currently faces a complicated political and economic transition as well as the consolidation of peace and the beginning of a demanding road of accession to the European Union.

However, all of these challenges are taking place against a background of dropping donor assistance and widespread poverty, which requires clear priority setting and maximised use of international and national funds to successfully manage BiH’s transition process.

Clarity of UN interventions over the years to come in supporting the country’s transition should hopefully also foster and contribute to improved strategic support from the international community around clear priorities.

In formulating this strategic framework for the UN activities, the UNCT took into particular account the BiH specific MDG challenges and objectives that the country needs to meet by 2015 as well as the provisions of the BiH Medium Term Development Strategy – PRSP (2004-2007) and the demands of the feasibility study as a prelude for opening of discussions between the European Union and BiH on accession.

The UNDAF also contains:
- Estimated Resource Requirement;
- Management and Coordination Arrangements;
- Monitoring and Evaluation Arrangements; and
- UNDAF Matrix that summarises the various interventions of the UN agencies and the corresponding agency country programme outcomes;
- Matrix summarising human rights and BiH policy frameworks.

Lastly and importantly, the current UNDAF is developed within the Human Rights Based Approach to Development and all UN interventions will contribute to the capacity development of government and responsible non-state actors to ensure the respect, protection and fulfilment of human rights in BiH, as well as to the capacity development of the civil society to claim their rights.
1. INTRODUCTION

Global
The UNDAF was launched in 1997 as an integral and important part of the UN Secretary-General’s plans for reform of the organisation. The main aim of the UNDAF is to ensure complementarity of activities at the country level around key human rights and development objectives in order to optimise the technical and financial resources available to the UN System.

Bosnia and Herzegovina
The formulation of an UNDAF by the UNCT in BiH reflects the need to harmonise programme cycles and improve programme collaboration. Although the formulation of the UNDAF has involved the whole UNCT and reflects common concerns, the process is spearheaded by the DGO Executive Committee agencies, present in BiH, that are required to harmonise their country programme cycles, namely UNICEF, UNFPA and UNDP. Participating agencies agreed that the UNDAF and country programmes for BiH should run for a four year period 2005-2008 instead of the usual five, given the continuing transition in the country.

In this, the DGO agencies and the UNCT were guided by two major concerns. Firstly, it is clear that BiH is now characterised by the challenges of transition. The overwhelming humanitarian emergency context that characterised the country for the most part of the nineties has subsided, calling for new, longer-term programmes of capacity-building and technical assistance.

Secondly, there was a shared feeling amongst the UNCT that only collaborative and complimentary efforts around a clear strategic plan of support to the country’s complicated and difficult post-war political, social and economic transition would ensure maximising the assistance from the UN agencies. The latter is deemed even more important given the sharp falls expected in international assistance.

The current UNDAF therefore articulates the major challenges for BiH, the key-agreed-upon priority areas for UN support and articulates the roles and responsibilities of the DGO agencies in particular, around three key Outcomes, namely:

- Strengthened accountability and responsiveness of Government to pro-active citizens;
- Improved access to and quality of basic education, health and social protection services;
- Improved Government and local community management of mine action, including mine risk education and mine victim assistance, and small arms and light weapons at national and national levels.

Human Rights Based Approach
In May 2003, UN agencies adopted a common understanding for a human rights based approach to the development cooperation and development programming of UN agencies:

1. All programmes of development co-operation, policies and technical assistance should further the realisation of human rights as laid down in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international human rights instruments;
2. Human rights standards contained in, and principles derived from, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international human rights instruments, guide all development cooperation and programming in all sectors and all phases of the programming and development cooperation; and
3. Development cooperation contributes to the development of the capacities of ‘duty-bearer’ to meet their obligations and/or of ‘rights-holders’ to claim their rights.

The UN agencies agreed that the BiH UNDAF should be premised on the human rights based approach to development as the common basis for all activities. In addition, Gender, Youth, Children and the Environment were identified as key issues for mainstreaming across the three UNDAF Outcomes.
Nothing is more important in consolidating a strong multi-ethnic democratic system of Government in BiH than ensuring that the human rights of all people in BiH are protected, respected and fulfilled by the BiH government, including with support from the international organisations, in order to avoid discrimination on any basis, social exclusion of marginalised and disadvantaged groups.

UNDAF Process

The current UNDAF document reflects the common experience of the DGO Executive Committee agencies and the wider UNCT over nearly a decade of operations in BiH. The Country Common Study (CCS) led by the UN Resident Coordinator in 2001 reflected the first attempt of the UN agencies to develop a shared vision on the major problems and challenges facing BiH as it became clear that the overwhelmingly humanitarian context was giving way to stability and challenges more akin to transition.

In 2003, in order to further strengthen and highlight the relevance and role of the UN in BiH, the UNCT embarked on the formulation of the Common Country Assessment (CCA). The process received an important boost in July 2003 with an UNDAF prioritisation workshop that included representatives from Government, civil society, various UN agencies and other international Organisations such as OSCE. The workshop assisted in sharpening the role of the UN in BiH and identifying synergies and complementarities with other important development actors.

The three-day workshop ended with a presentation of the conclusions to two of BiH’s State-level Minister Kebo (Human Rights and Refugees) and Minister Halilovic (Civil Affairs).

Working Groups were established around the three key areas of cooperation involving other UNCT agencies, non-UN partners, and Government and NGOs to refine the Outcomes, the respective analysis, areas of interventions and roles of relevant partners.

The current UNDAF has also benefited from comments and contributions from non-resident UN agencies.

During 2004, the DGO Executive Committee agencies in consultation with the other UNCT agencies identified the new working group mechanisms and concrete monitoring and evaluation arrangements to be in place by January 2005 to support effective UNDAF implementation.

2. UNDAF RESULTS

2.1. Current BiH Context and Development Challenges

The UNDAF is premised on the analysis in the CCA on the major challenges and difficulties facing post-war BiH. The country is undergoing a complicated and sensitive process of State-building made-up of four major delicate transitions, namely: the consolidation of peace; from international tutelage to full sovereignty and independence, from a central economy to a free-market one; and, all importantly accession to Europe and the NATO security structures.

BiH has made important strides since the signing of the Dayton Peace Agreement in December 1995 across all spheres of national activity. The country’s macro-economic stability has been maintained, inflation is less than 1%, and the growth rate is an estimated 5 percent (2003). Domestic reserves have risen more than 15-fold since 1997 while foreign direct investment increased by 70% in 2002 to $241 million. The currency is stable and the banking sector is seen as a model in the region. Agreement has been reached on a single economic space, unified customs, and value-added tax. Remittances account for some 15% of BDP and significantly bolster the economy and prevent wider levels of poverty. According to UNDP EWS reports, a growing number of people in all ethnic groups now see their future linked to the state of BiH and a recent Defence reform has established a State-level Ministry for Defence along with a unified chain of command for the country’s previously three armies. This is crucial to membership of NATO’s “Partnership for Peace”.

Transition, vulnerability and social exclusion. Outstanding challenges, however, remain and are related to the vulnerability and social exclusion of disadvantaged groups from full participation in and benefit from the process of transition.

Like other transition countries, while the macro-economic indicators are fairly good and encouraging, BiH has a growing economy but also widespread poverty and social hardship. Despite signs of renewed economic growth and reduced inflation, gross national per capita income is around the 1990 level of $1,263. The latter figure is of course hard to determine, as the exact population of BiH remains unclear. A lower population than the estimated 3.6 million would lead to an estimated per capita income of around USD 2,000.

Jobs and equitable growth are pivotal. Unemployment estimates range from 16% to 44% depending on methodologies but could worsen as privatisation accelerates. Popular perceptions of the economy and Government are pessimistic and fuel anxiety. Discontent has led to increased strikes and protests and could worsen leading to instability.

Poverty is also exacerbated by discrimination, and many or the poor and vulnerable are from groups who experience discrimination on grounds of ethnicity, political affiliation, age, status as internally displaced persons (IDPs) or returnees, their residence in rural areas, gender or disability or being a pensioner. Some 20% of the population is estimated to live below the poverty line with the Serb population most affected and is also leading to an Entity poverty gap. Over 30% of the poor are under 18 years of age. Middle-aged workers that will be unemployed as a consequence of wider privatisation are also set to swell the ranks of the poor. Almost three quarters of young people would leave the country if they could mostly in search of work. Poverty in the country is also strongly characterised by a regional dimension with poverty levels in the RS consistently higher than the rest of BiH as shown by the UNDP EWS in the period 1999-2004.

UNHCR figures indicate that close to one million of the 2.2 million BiH inhabitants forced to be internally displaced or refugees during the war have returned to their areas of origin. Another 300,000 to 400,000 people are estimated to be still in need of a durable solution to their displacement situation. Today, it is acknowledged that the right to return of these people requires tailor-made support but a durable solution is only possible through successful community-wide development processes. While the international community has supported the right to return as a cornerstone of the Dayton peace process, other forms of durable solutions, such as local integration, have not been pursued as vigorously. Moreover, closely linked to the latter, while the right to return has been enshrined in the peace process, there has been no discussion on support for “the right to stay “ to assist those that do not wish to return to areas of origin.

Although both men and women have suffered as a consequence of the war, gender inequalities have actually worsened in terms of women having lower representation in Government than before and very low representation in the executive positions within the private sector. Women make up only 37% of the workforce, which is the lowest in South-East Europe. Discrimination is also manifest in the prevalence of and inadequate response to domestic and sexual violence and abuse.

Social exclusion prevents citizens from fully contributing to and participating in society by limiting their civil, political and social rights. In BiH, post-war aid addressed the humanitarian and developmental needs of various groups, but it did not effectively tackle discrimination and social exclusion. This is also reflected in the general lack of data disaggregated by gender, ethnicity, age and social status, or information on living standards and the quality of life. The absence of up-to-date population data - the last national population census dates from 1991, prior to ethnic cleansing and displacement - renders most national-level data incomplete or inadequate

In this context, the CCA identified the main challenges to be: weak governance, decreasing access to and quality of basic education and health services, inadequate social protection, continued risk posed by over 1 million landmines and unexploded ordinance and poor environmental protection.

Weak governance

The country’s Government structure, which stems from the Dayton Peace Agreement, remains cumbersome and expensive, eating up some 54% of GDP. As the UNDP EWS system has repeatedly shown, confidence in Government is low and there is a widespread popular belief in high levels of corruption in Government structures. At the crux of the matter, ten years after Dayton there is a pressing need for BiH citizens to discuss and define a new and workable liberal democratic, multi-ethnic Government structure. Despite the various levels of Government and their claims to represent the relevant ethnic group, it is interesting to note that that over 70% of the group polled during a Governance perception survey felt they had no input into policy-making.

Since 2000, the BiH Government has adopted a number of frameworks and action plans (on child rights, combating human trafficking, mine action, HIV/AIDS, poverty reduction, gender equality, and primary and secondary education) relevant to the promotion of children’s and women’s rights. But the divergence of policies and practices resulting from the political and administrative fragmentation restricts their implementation. Basic and social services continue to be delivered in an uneven manner, a development reinforced by the absence of effective equalization of standards and mechanisms to supplement services in poorer regions with central-level funding. The inefficiencies and even contradictions that come from the current Government structure affect all sectors of national activity.

Civil society, in its widest sense, ranging from CSOs and NGOs, to religious associations to trade unions also remains weak as an advocacy tool for citizens, as there is little experience or tradition of independently advocating for interest group issues in the official policy-making process. The disadvantaged and socially excluded have no lobby and are largely invisible.

Decreasing access and quality of basic health, education and social protection services.

The general welfare of the population and especially of the most disadvantaged and socially excluded has also been worsened as a consequence of deteriorating quality and access to basic social services. This results from the fragmentation and proliferation of Government structures leading to expensive and inefficient arrangements that and drain already limited budgets.

Educational opportunities are uneven, depending on ethnicity and the wealth of Cantons. On average, primary-school enrolment rate is high at 94%, but only 33% for Roma children. In rural communities, on average, children attend school for two years less than in urban areas. Children with special needs are often excluded. Distinct education systems in the entities promote ethnic separation. An increased number of minority returnee children are attending school in their place of return following the adoption of the Interim Agreement on Accommodation of Special Needs and Rights of Returnee Children in 2002. Yet, bussing of returnee children outside school catchment areas continues. The ratio of boys to girls in education is mostly equal, but girls are still discriminated against, in particular returnee girls whose families face dire economic hardship, and in rural areas where girls face cultural and economic barriers to schooling.

Low fertility, and as a result, declining growth and ageing of the population in the country in recent years, created serious concern about the demographic changes in BiH, accentuated by mass migration within and out of the country. The decline in the size of the population will continue in the years to come if the trends in birth and mortality rates and the level of migration remain the same.

Reproductive health is also a cause of concern. Many women rely on abortion as a method of fertility regulation. Low contraceptive prevalence results from a lack of information on the benefits of family planning, and a lack of availability and accessibility of contraceptives. Other reasons for low prevalence rates of effective contraception include: misinformation and rumours on the side effects of modern contraceptives, a prioritization of ethnic identity values over gender equality, discrimination versus human rights, lack of information about the benefits of contraception; a lack of a standardized systematic infrastructure that can refer persons in need of outpatient health services, and lack of training for health professional and service providers on family planning and reproductive health. A rapid increase in sexually transmitted infections may mean increased transmission of HIV/AIDS – without a functioning surveillance system in place, figures are not accurate. Finally, the migration patterns of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs), rapid spread of drug abuse and addiction, prevalence of poverty and domestic violence, and proliferation of commercial sex and human trafficking in recent years have increased the infection rates of STDs, most certainly including HIV, compounding reduced accessibility of health care services to all persons. While reported prevalence rates for HIV/AIDS are low, a hidden epidemic may be masked among vulnerable and socially stigmatized groups. UNICEF research indicates that high-risk behaviour continues among drug users, men having sex with men and sex workers. All of these factors have posed a serious threat to the reproductive and sexual health of the population, especially among young people.

The extent to which youth, women, and other vulnerable groups suffer from violence, abuse, neglect, exploitation, and discrimination is not systematically monitored, but what data is available suggests such victimization is common and widespread. Additionally, further, data on reproductive health, including the number of abortions, contraceptive use, knowledge, prevention measures used, are limited and suggest that there is large demand for quality measurement, recording, and evaluation of demographics, service provision, and the quality of health of those living in BiH.

The under-five mortality rate of 18 per 1,000 live births is close to the Western European average, but there are concerns about underreporting. One fifth of children are not fully vaccinated. Only approximately 5% of infants aged 0-3 months are exclusively breastfed. Opportunities for early childhood educational development are limited, particularly in rural areas and among minority populations. Some 90% of Roma have no health insurance, effectively excluding them from access to health care. Despite recent inter-entity agreements on health and education, an estimated 50% of IDPs and returnees still pay for their healthcare. Discriminatory practices and prejudice of HIV/AIDS, mental illness, disability and drug users are prevalent among communities and professionals, reducing the quality of services and discouraging access. Health workers routinely and illegally demand payment prior to examination.

As a result of the legacy of war and the poverty and displacement that followed, a weak social welfare system is neither adequately financed nor equipped to face the growing demands from those seeking assistance. Social welfare is currently a patchy network of family support, state social welfare systems, NGOs and community-based initiatives. Problems that have emerged since the end of the war, such as domestic violence, abuse and trafficking of women and children for sexual exploitation further increase the number of people who need support from the system. Approximately 3,500 children live in public care, either in under-funded residential care institutions or with foster parents who receive little support to provide adequate care.\(^7\) Over 100 cases of child trafficking have been registered since 1999, but the real number is assumed to be much higher. Response mechanisms, however, remain ineffective.\(^8\)

Landmines continue to be a major challenge to human lives and economic development. BiH continues to be the most mined-country in Europe. Over 1 million landmines, mostly anti-personnel, and many types of unexploded ordnance (UXO) still affect some 2,600 communities, placing an estimated 100,000 people at high risk of landmine accidents and restricting access to services and development. A total of 18,145 minefields have been recorded, however it is estimated that the likely number is probably as high as 30,000. The number of UXO has been estimated at 2 million. The large number of small arms and light weapons (SALW) in BiH is a sad legacy of the war. During the past four years, SFOR has collected over 23,000 pieces of SALW throughout the country and those efforts are continuing. In addition to widespread holding of arms by the civilian population, the unsafe storage of arms and UXOs by the Entity armies further exposes the civilian population to increased risks. The problem of SALW in BiH is exasperated by a ‘gun-culture’.

Poor environmental protection is a result of the lack of environmental policy, legislation and its implementation, poor public participation and unsustainable rural and urban development. These problems are very much interlinked. Poor waste and rubbish collection, inadequate water and waste treatment systems, and various pollution hazards result in serious environmental health problems.

To these challenges must be added the declining international support and the fact that aid fell from a high of $750 million/year to approximately $270 million in 2004. Donor fatigue is thus a problem not just for the economy, as it goes through a difficult transition, but more importantly to support the country as it embarks on tackling crucial issues linked to laying the basis for long-term development and the consolidation of peace. In essence, BiH needs continued support to maximise the investment of the international community to date.

2.2. Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP) and the road to Europe

MDGs and PRSP. While BiH does fairly well with regard to the global MDGs targets, it is clear that the country faces certain challenges in particular of governance, poverty, gender inequality, the environment, as well as trade and international assistance. Moreover, although it does relatively well in terms of general average health, education and child mortality indicators, the challenge facing BiH is to restore pre-war levels and improve standards.

The MDGs agenda and the PRSP are closely linked in BiH with the approved PRSP document containing some 70% of MDGs related indicators. The UN agencies are committed to advocating and supporting BiH in meeting the 2015 MDG objectives. The MDG BiH specific data and analysis are major inputs to the Outcomes presented in this UNDAF and in the new Country Programmes for UNICEF, UNDP and UNFPA.

MDGs, PRSP and the road to Europe. The UN agencies support the Government’s commitment to setting BiH on the road to Europe, which has been another important factor in designing the current UNDAF. A study by UNDP to safeguard synergies between what sometimes appear as three different processes revealed that, despite different timeframes, all three share the same key concerns and goals: Governance/Public Administration reform in particular, poverty reduction and provision of basic social sectors, the economy and the environment.

Supporting inter-related processes. The three Outcomes seek to support major priorities that are common to the MDG’s, PRSP and accession to the European Union.

2.3. UNDAF Outcomes

After carefully assessing the comparative advantages of the UN, the most pressing development challenges and roles of other development partners in BiH since the start of the UNDAF process, the UNCT and the DGO Executive Committee agencies in particular, have focused on three collective Outcomes.

The Outcomes and interventions outlined in this document do not constitute all the activities of the agencies in BiH. They do however represent the major programmatic thrusts of the agencies concerned and the areas and initiatives that will be subject to close, complementary or joint programming.

The hallmark of UN assistance which will underline activities across the three Outcomes is the human rights based approach to development cooperation, including the provision of neutral, impartial technical assistance in supporting Government and non-Government structures human capacities and resources.

2.3.1. GOVERNANCE

Outcome 1 is designed to achieve “Strengthened accountability and responsiveness of Government to pro-active citizens”.

BiH’s current Governance arrangements need to be overhauled as a premise for all other development. Improved, responsible and accountable Government and a greater dialogue between the Government and citizens lies at the centre of achieving the MDGs, consolidating the post war system of democratic, multi-ethnic Government in BiH and in ensuring the capacity of Government to meet its international human rights obligations constitutionally incorporated into BiH law. BiH has legislation barring overt forms of discrimination, and in some instances has taken affirmative action. In practice, however, institutional bias and discriminatory practices are commonplace and warrant both improved policy frameworks and means for their implementation. State-level policies and laws are often developed and adopted without clear identification of priorities, responsibilities or budgets for their enforcement. There is an absence of appropriate national standards and adequate regulatory frameworks.

In addition to Government fragmentation, modern policy-making practice is limited and undermined by the lack of an independent, professional civil service with a merit-based career management system. Monitoring and enforcement of mechanisms for redress in cases of discrimination and abuse are weak. Hence, improved Governance is a key to ensuring access to and quality provision of all public services.

Civil society remains weak. In many cases, the most organised face of citizens are NGOs. However, in many cases NGOs lack know-how on advocacy, management and even specialised knowledge on particular issues that they represent. More importantly, the post-war emphasis on civil society seems to have nurtured a large number of NGOs that depend on international funds for their existence, rather than on their constituencies.

There is no enabling environment for participation at the community level, especially for children and young people. Families and schools struggling to provide basic needs rarely promote child participation in teaching, play and recreation. The media contribute to the perpetuation of social exclusion by conveying messages of stereotyping, segregation and distrust of those who are “different”. Few media structures provide space for children and young people to discuss social issues.

9 See Annex 6.2 (Human Rights and National Policy Frameworks) for list of international conventions ratified by BiH.
The major thrust of the UNCT strategy, including UNHCR under this Outcome, is to strengthen the institutional, policy and human capacities of Government at State, Entity and local level as well as that of NGOs, with a view to fostering a more participatory policy-making framework between Government and civil society.

Within this strategic approach, UNDP, UNICEF and UNFPA will contribute and assist a number of important ongoing BiH processes, namely:

a) Public Administration reform;

b) Implementation of the State Plan of Action for Children, the National Strategy on Prevention and Fighting against HIV/AIDS, National Action Plan to combat trafficking in human beings, Gender Equality Law;

c) Development of state wide BiH policies and national machinery on Youth, Gender and Reproductive health;

d) Effective PRSP and MDG monitoring;

e) Improved national capacity for socio-economic research;

f) Strengthened NGO capacity at national/local level and in particular areas such: youth, women’s rights and gender equality, children’s rights;

g) Improved awareness of citizens of their rights.

Key UN interventions and strategic partnerships

In more concrete terms, under this Outcome, UNDP will focus on:

- Building improved municipal-level capacity for community development planning and implementation. UNDP will develop an integrated municipal approach that brings duty-bearers and rights holders, government, civil society and the private sector closer together in taking responsibility for their local development, through: (i) the establishment of local fora for dialogue between the three partners; (ii) formulation and implementation of municipal rights-based development plans; (iii) training of municipal civil servants; (iv) local economic development; (v) strengthening the capacity of civil society organizations (CSOs) for constituent advocacy and (vi) improved use of ICT to streamline business processes;

- Assisting the BiH public administration reform process with regard to in particular formulation of strategic approach to civil service reform/training and establishment of the Federation Civil Service Agency as well as judicial training. Assisting and reinforcing the capacity of the state and Entities to foster, manage, coordinate and support municipal development initiatives by concentrating in areas most likely to improve overall Government performance and sensitivities to the realities of contemporary decision-making, particularly at local level by (i) supporting the overall process of public administration reform and in particular development of an all-BiH strategic approach to civil service training and reform of the Federation through the establishment of its Civil Service Agency; (ii) introduction of comprehensive e-Governance practices;

- Supporting improved BiH strategic medium-term policy frameworks and institutional capacity for return, youth, gender, ICT, public investment framework and improved management of international assistance.

UNICEF will support the policy makers at state entity and municipal levels to provide leadership in coordinating implementation and monitoring of national policies that affect children’s and women’s rights to achieve the following key results:

- Increased knowledge of policy and working level government officials and civil servants on CRC and CEDAW monitoring, planning, budgeting, data collection and analysis;

- Harmonisation of regulatory frameworks and the development of minimum standards in child protection, education and health, including guidelines for the prevention of child trafficking, abuse, neglect and domestic violence; guidelines for treatment of children in conflict with the law; guidelines for the promotion of fostering and adoption and the welfare of children in public care;

- Implementation of certification and licensing of teachers and standards for child-centred schools.

UNICEF and UNFPA will jointly focus on:
- Development and implementation of standards and guidelines for youth-friendly health services
- Domestic violence

UNICEF will also focus on civil society, schools and media to enable increased number of children and young people to participate meaningfully in their communities and in monitoring in BiH State Plan of Action for Children through:

- Increase technical and financial capacity of selected NGOs and CSOs to build community capacities to organise and implement projects to promote participation of children in community projects;
- 450 schools to institutionalise child participation through adoption and implementation of child-centred teaching/learning approaches and promotion of life-skills education;
- Improved media capacity with an emphasis on children’s programming with involvement of children.

UNHCR will focus on:

- Providing support to BiH authorities, including the State Commission for Refugees and Displaced Persons (SCRDP), in coordination of sustainable return and reintegration as outlined in the Strategy for the Implementation of Annex VII (GFAP);
- Building the capacity of national CSOs (namely Bosnia and Herzegovina Women’s Initiative and Vasa Prava Legal Aid Network), to provide legal information, advice and representation to the most vulnerable persons in BiH, including IDPs, returnees, refugees, asylum seekers, single mothers, children, the elderly and persons with disabilities, in relation to their civil, social and economic rights, as well as regarding women’s issues, rights and empowerment;
- Strengthening the capacity of the State to develop and manage a viable asylum system, including policy, legislation and procedures, in a manner consistent with international standards.

Key partners will be all State levels Ministries, Entity Ministries of Education, Health and Social Welfare, municipal governments, Ombudsman Offices and the Civil Service Agencies. UNOHCHR will be an important partner when it comes to legal/human rights issues and UNV is UNDP’s main partner for implementation of all youth-related activities. UNHCR will also be a key strategic partner on all issues pertaining to return whether in terms of policy formulation or on-the-ground assistance; OSCE in relation to coordination of the National Education Reform.

A number of national and international NGOs will also be closely involved such as Save the Children UK, CARE, VSO. The Office of the High Representative the EU and the World Bank will also be close partners.

2.3.2. SOCIAL PROTECTION, EDUCATION AND HEALTH

The UN agencies will jointly seek to ensure Outcome 2: “Improved access to and quality of basic education, health and social protection services.”

This outcome is designed to support BiH in meeting the right to social protection, education and health of the population guaranteed under BiH law.\(^\text{10}\) Support to these sectors also corresponds with the relevant MDGs\(^\text{11}\) and commitments under the Millennium Declaration.\(^\text{12}\)

While this Outcome is designed to support BiH’s capacity to deliver on essential public goods and the welfare of the population at large, the focus on social protection also aims to respond to \(^{10}\) See Annex 6.2 (Human Rights and National Policy Frameworks) for list of international conventions ratified by BiH.

\(^{11}\) Achievement of five out of eight MDGs is related to the right to education and health. These include goals to 1) achieve universal primary education; 2) reduce child mortality; 3) improve maternal health; 4) combat HIV/AIDs, malaria and other diseases; and 5) to promote gender equality and empower women.

\(^{12}\) The Millennium Declaration commitment to protecting the vulnerable equally recognizes the vulnerability of children and includes specific reference to the ratification and full implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Children (CRC) and its optional protocols. Section VI Protecting the Vulnerable, United Nations Millennium Declaration, UN General Assembly Resolution A/RES/55/2 [...To encourage the ratification and full implementation of the CRC and its optional protocols on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography.]
the social hardship and growing social exclusion that results from this phase of the country’s political, social and economic transition. Socially disadvantaged groups do not have access to mainstream services and their rights and needs are not respected in the practices of service providers. In particular, UN interventions will aim to strengthen the capacities and motivation of education, health and child protection services providers to reach the most vulnerable children, young people and women.

Two major pillars underline the strategic approach of the UN in this outcome, namely:

- a) Reverse the increasingly unequal access to basic social services and improve their quality;
- b) Develop common strategies that focus on providing increased social protection for vulnerable groups such as children, youth, women and the elderly.

In concrete terms the UN interventions will assist and contribute to important processes already on-going namely:

- a) BiH national education and health reform processes;
- b) Establishment of youth friendly services;
- c) Ensuring and monitoring that basic social services are non-discriminatory and reach the most disadvantaged;
- d) Improved implementation and monitoring of the PRSP, especially regarding the protection of the vulnerable;

Key UN interventions and strategic partnerships

UNICEF and UNFPA will collaborate closely to support government and NGOs to provide quality basic social services.

UNICEF will support government and NGO service providers to ensure that provision of basic education and health and child protection services are inclusive, non-discriminatory and child-friendly, reaching the most disadvantaged. The expected key results include:

- All children under five years of age, including members of disadvantaged groups, will be immunized with all basic antigens through a regular and uninterrupted supply of vaccines;
- Ministries of Education will ensure enrolment and monitor access to schools for disadvantaged and socially excluded children;
- Increased number of young people at risk of infection from HIV/AIDS (including injecting drug users and other highly vulnerable groups) will have access to “youth-friendly” government and NGO health care services;
- Ministries of Health will establish parent support groups in selected IDP temporary settlements and Roma communities to improve the early childhood development knowledge and practices of parents from disadvantaged IDP and Roma families;
- Government and NGO professionals responsible for child protection will be able to identify, monitor, refer and provide services for children at risk and children victims of abuse, violence, exploitation and trafficking;

UNFPA’s next phase of assistance in the area of reproductive health will be to build on the results achieved in the past three years in youth friendly health services and assist the development of policy on reproductive health. UNFPA will continue at the government’s requests to support the expanding and strengthening of youth friendly health services as a model of good provision of quality reproductive health care services. At the same time, at the policy level the UNFPA will work with the government on the revision of policy documents to reflect the ICPD PoA. More specifically UNFPA will:

- Further develop Peer Education
  - Print peer education manual and distribute across the country;
  - Train peer educators, develop theatre techniques in peer education;
o Sensitize school heads, curriculum planners, parent associations and specialist teachers;

o Develop certification mechanism of peer educators and trainers approved by appropriate government authorities and professional bodies;

o Institutionalise the maintenance of Y-PEER website;

o Institutionalise peer educator supervision and management;

o Develop standard age-appropriate lesson plans;

o Establish quality and educational content review mechanism.

- Strengthen Clinic services

o Health management information system up-graded to reflect gynaecological conditions, STIs, HIV, mental health, violence, nutritional and eating disorders, communicable and non-communicable disease and data base regularly updated with trend analysis;

o Code of conduct and clinical guidelines developed reflecting contemporary findings and scientific models including WHO best practice advice on management of adolescent health;

o Orientation and in-service training programme for medical staff in the centres developed;

o Voluntary, confidential counselling and testing for HIV/AIDS introduced in all sexual and reproductive health services:

o Electronic communication network between the centres, health professionals established;

o Control mechanism established in the institutions and developed further through the professional associations of nurses, obstetrician/gynecologists, pediatricians and mental health specialists.

- Integrate youth-friendly health services within health sector reform:

o Connecting with the family medicine model, referral mechanisms should be in place including to women’s sexual and reproductive health units (Dispanzer za zene) and to an appropriate special service for men within the health system.

o Inter-personal communication and counseling skills (on contraception, post-abortion contraception counselling, STIs including HIV, sexuality) upgraded and further extended to health workers and ancillary staff; incorporated into the existing health system training plan wherever appropriate and linked to education system reform at the appropriate level within the appropriate school professional training.

- Sexuality education within education sector and curriculum reform:

o Introduced into at least the 7th, 8th and 9th grades of compulsory education; sensitization of managers of teacher training colleges, provision of training of teachers, pedagogical specialists trained in curriculum development from a human sexuality perspective, workshops for the production of teaching and learning materials.

The Entity Ministries of Health, Education and Social Welfare will play a key role in implementation of UNICEF and UNFPA activities. Local NGOs and youth groups in particular will be the main local partners. UNHCR will also play a role in advocating, as well as supporting local NGOs, on issues of access to basic social services, including child protection services, for IDPs, refugees and returnees. Activities will be closely coordinated with WHO, UNVs, the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunization (GAVI), OSCE, the World Bank and bilateral donors.

2.3.3. HUMAN SECURITY

The joint UNDAF Outcome 3 is “Improved Government and local community management of mine action, including mine risk education (MRE) and Mine victim Assistance (MVA) and small arms and light weapons (SALW) at national and local levels.”

Landmines, UXOs and SALW violate the most basic human rights. The UN Millennium Declaration commitment to peace, security and disarmament, specifically refers to the prohibition of anti-personnel mines and commitment to end illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons. They also constitute a threat to human life, development and livelihoods, particularly in rural areas.

Mine Action and eradicating the problem of small arms and UXOs amongst the public and surplus storage in Entity armies is therefore a national priority also enshrined in the PRSP.

Government Management of mine action improved significantly. There is a solid mine action structure in place which has developed a legislative framework and a long term strategy striving for the country free from the effects of mines by 2010. 2003 has also seen increased national funding for mine action even at municipal level. In 2003, OHR officially passed it co-chairmanship of the Board of Donors to the Government that now co-manages this body with UNDP. However, there are still institutional capacity issues, the need to assure effective coordination around clear priorities and, above all insufficient funding levels to reach the objectives of the ten year goal.

National capacity to manage small arms both in terms of their widespread proliferation amongst civilians and UXOs and inadequate storage remains a priority, particularly as SFOR bring their Operation Harvest to a close in mid 2004.

Mine Risk education (MRE) is another key challenge. MRE in BiH has been isolated from mainstream mine action activity such as surveying, marking and clearing and has been the subject of uncoordinated approaches in schools. Similar problems have affected Mine Victim Assistance (MVA). In essence these problems have curbed the potential benefits of both MRE and MVA in dealing with the threat from mines, small arms and UXOs at the community level.

In order to achieve this Outcome UNDP and UNICEF will collaborate closely to foster:

- Increased Government capacity for mine action to meet the goals the ten year Mine Action Strategy, including integration of mine-risk education and mine victim assistance into mine action at the national and local levels;
- Improved capacity for mine risk reduction at local and community levels;
- Effective Government capacity to manage the issue of small arms and UXOS in terms of both the civilian population and Entity army surpluses as well as the collection and destruction of these.

The joint and integrated activity of UNDP and UNICEF will support a number of national priorities, namely:

- The ten year mine action strategy and thereby reducing the risk posed by landmines.
- The implementation of the Ottawa Convention and the Convention on Conventional Weapons (CCW) as outlined in the National Mine Action Strategy,
- State Plan of Action for Children
- Development and strengthening of national institutional and policy capacity to manage SALW and UXO matters (civilian and military) small arms and UXO issues of a national strategy regarding issues on SALW.

Key UN interventions and Strategic partnerships

UNDP's 2005-2009 Human Security programme will have two major pillars, one focusing on mine action and the other on small arms. A new five year programme framework for mine action is being developed to cover the period 2005-2010. The aim of this programme is to provide a comprehensive medium-term mechanism for coordinated assistance by donors to support national capacities in this sector as well as a shift towards more economic priorities. A new programme is also underway to build institutional capacity to deal with the threat of small arms in BiH amongst the civilian population and may involve assisting with a handover of responsibilities from the NATO's Stabilization Force to national partners. UNDP will focus its intervention on supporting improved coordination amongst Donors and with national Government structures when it comes to:
- BiH’s Institutional and policy capacity for mine action through the BHMAC structure; and
- Establishment of new institutional and policy framework to manage SALW and UXOs in civilian and military hands as well as national capacity for destruction and,
- Improved, strategic coordination of international development assistance for the sector.

UNICEF will focus on:
- Supporting BHMAC to develop and implement a policy framework that integrates mine-risk education and mine victim assistance into mine action at the national and local levels;
- Mainstream mine risk education into education curricula and mine victim assistance into national policy on disability;
- Support communities in 154 areas highly affected by landmines to assess, develop and implement responses to risks associated with mine action. This will include mine-risk education and mine victim assistance, including on small arms and light weapons, and will reach approximately 100,000 people;
- Increasing technical capacity and resources of specialised NGOs/CSOs to provide social and medical support to victims of landmine accidents.

BHMAC and the state level Ministry of Civil Affairs are the main key Government bodies responsible for the Mine Action sector in BiH and the implementation of the ten year strategy. UNDP and UNICEF activity will support the work of these bodies. Other important partners here will be municipal governments and NGOs.

4. IMPLEMENTATION ARRANGEMENTS

4.1. Implementation
UN system assistance will be provided, using the procedures of each agency, with a view to strengthening national capacity of the Government and NGOs counterparts in their role of the “duty bearers” responsible for policy development and delivery of services and ensuring participation of beneficiaries or “claim holders”.

Efforts will be made to ensure that UN system support contributes to the formulation or implementation of national programmes and strategies, and is part of a larger whole of coordinated inputs, from both UN and other partners, both national and international.

4.2. Coordination
Maximum efforts will be made to promote coordination between UN agencies, other donors and NGOs, involved in the same sector, so as to promote synergies, and multiplier effects.
An UNDAF Steering Committee (SC) will be established to monitor and coordinate UNDAF implementation. The SC would be made up of representatives of the UN agencies involved, and chaired by a Lead Agency/Chairman, selected through consensus or by the Resident Coordinator, as appropriate.

Theme Groups will be established for each of the three themes (Governance, Basic Social Services, and Human Security), and terms of reference prepared.

The SC will meet periodically (monthly, quarterly, six monthly), as agreed upon by all members, as would the Theme Groups.

The SC will be serviced by the Resident Coordinator’s Office, which would prepare a work plan, and help to ensure that it is implemented. Theme groups would be serviced by the office of the theme groups’ chairperson.

The SC, in conjunction with the Theme Groups, will be responsible for:
- Establishing an appropriate Results-Based Management system for UN system support, based on the Results Matrix and the Monitoring and Evaluation Frameworks (MEF), to be amplified and updated as appropriate;
- Updating the UNDAF Results Matrix, and MEFs on a regular basis;
- Assessing progress vis-à-vis outcomes and outputs, as given in project documents and work plans;
- Addressing actions required to for risk and external factor/management;
- Assessing the role and impact of UN system with respect to broader goals of national programmes and strategies, where they exist;
- Identifying needs, and facilitating the preparation of national programmes and strategies, as appropriate.

5. MONITORING AND EVALUATION

5.1. Monitoring
Normal monitoring activities would consist of regular reporting (quarterly, semi-annual, etc.), followed by meetings of the SC. A Mid-Term Review will take place at the end of 2006 to take stock of progress towards achievement of UNDAF and Country Programme Outcomes, and to make recommendations as appropriate.

The SC mentioned in Part 4 above will be responsible for the overall monitoring of the UNDAF, in both operational and substantive terms.

The SC will use the following tools, for its reviews:
1. M & E Programme Cycle Calendar, so as to be able to plan future monitoring and evaluation benchmarks and activities;\(^{14}\)
2. Results Matrix, to be up-dated on a regular basis;
3. Outcome Progress Reports, to be prepared by the chairperson of the Theme Group (Governance, Basic Social Services, Human Security), on a quarterly and/or semi-annual basis, according to a format to be developed.
4. Monitoring and Evaluation Framework (MEF), or logframe. MEFs or logframes will be prepared by each Theme Group for each Outcome, and country programme outcomes. MEF will be developed by the UNCT in 2005 and will identify indicators and baselines on which to assess the achievement of UNDAF and country programme outcomes, sources of verification, risks and assumptions. MEFs will be updated on periodic basis with the Theme Group Reports.

Key indicators of progress will be developed to assess: the implementation and coherence of national policies at different political and administrative levels; opportunities for participation in decision making of citizens, including from excluded groups and young people; and the degree of social inclusiveness of services. The quality of the community mine action plans that are implemented and the percentage of landmine victims receiving adequate supported will also be measured. Indicators for MDGs will be tracked in DevInfo. UN agencies will also support surveys and assessments to feed into Mid-Term Review and Evaluation of UNDAF.

5.2. Evaluation
An evaluation will take place towards the UNDAF period in 2008, so as to take stock of achievements, and highlight needs and lessons of experience. This would enable stakeholders to draw on lessons of experience, and to make recommendations on follow-up.
